

O Shiva, pills composed of Haridra, Tandulam, Apamarga, Trikatu, and the roots of white Aparajiti pasted together with Sikthanftj undoubtedly alleviate all forms of cholera. A compound consisting of Trikatu, Triphali, Shilajatu, and Haritaki pounded together, and taken with honey, proves curative, O Shankara, in all forms of urinary coinplaints (Meha). Take one Palam of Manah-Shila, one Palam of Maricham, and one Palam of Sindurana ; pound them together and keep them soaked in a Prastha measure of sesame oil and the milky exudations ^of Arka plants in a copper vessel. Dry this compound in shade; this compound, as well as rock-salt taken with the milky exudations of a Snuhi plant, would be found to be highly efficacious in relieving all forms of colic (and neuralgic pain as well.) Take Trikatu, Triphala; Alaktam, sesame oil, Realgar, NJmva leaves, Jlti floWers, goat's milk, Shankha-aabhi, ChandaTia, and goat's urine, mil them together and make the ina^s into a stick. An appli* cation of this stick, pasted with water, to the eyes in the manner of a coliyrium, cures loss of vision, cataract, aud kindred ocular affections. Powders of Vibhitaka seeds taken with honey relieve all forms of asthma; a compou&d of Triphali, Pippali and rock-salt pounded together and taken with honey proves beneficial in all forms of fever, cough, catarrh, asthma tbronchites) and Pthisis. Soak Deva-daru powders with goat's urine, and dry them in shade, do this twenty-one times in succession; the application of this medicine to the eyes in the manner of a collyrium proves curative in night-blindness, Loss of vision, and falling < ff of the eye-lashes. O Rudra, a compound consisting of Pippali, Ketakam, Haridra. Amiakam and Vacha pounded together and applied to the eyes with the addition of milk proves beneficial' in all forms of ocular affections. ' O Shiva, n ofs

 of Sbigru and Kakajangha kept in the mouth or continued together tend to relieve all diseases of the teeth.
